Was Leader In Budapest, Dies Rabbi Of Honolulu

Dr. Francis Hevesi, chief rabbi of Honolulu, and former chief rabbi of Budapest, Hungary, died of a heart attack in Honolulu. His age was 53. Descended from many Talmudic scholars and distinguished men of letters, Dr. Hevesi succeeded his father, Dr. Simon Hevesi, as chief rabbi of Budapest after the latter's death in 1942. The son received a Ph. D. from the University of Budapest in 1920 and was ordained in 1922.

In his student days Dr. Hevesi headed the Association of Jewish University Students, a group that fought anti-Jewish discrimination. Under his guidance the organization enlisted the aid of the Government of Hungary in checking anti-Semitic riots.

In 1932 an anti-Jewish farangit invaded a Budapest synagogue and fired many shots, whereupon, Dr. Hevesi seized him and turned him over to the police. In later years he was a leader of Jewish democratic resistance in Hungary to Nazism and Communism, reports the New York Times.

Dr. Hevesi held several important pulpits in Hungary and in 1929 became rabbi of the Central Synagogue of Budapest, sharing the rabbinical duties with his father. He founded in Budapest the Jewish Free University to aid adult education. He succeeded his father as Professor of Religious Philosophy and Homiletics at the National Rabbinical Seminary of Hungary.

The son was the author of a volume on the religious implications of Dr. Sigmund Freud's psychoanalytical ideas, a volume of essays on religious and philosophical topics and a novel, based on two visits to the United States, dealing with religious life there.

Israel Pins Hope On Crop Prospects

After a winter of bountiful rains and mild weather, Israel is looking forward to bumper crops and some easing of food shortages. Although the country will remain far from self-sufficient in food, it will raise about half its requirements in all kinds of animal fodder this year, and on this basis it will be able to increase the next year's output.

Levi Eshkol, Minister of Agriculture and Development, has estimated that a bumper crop will permit a $10,000,000 saving in fodder imports. Since the beginning of the year only 300 grams (about 10.5 ounces) of meat have been distributed on ration individually — about enough for one medium-size steak. The small poultry ration is seven months overdue.

The meat scarcity has been felt especially in the last few months because it has been accompanied by a scarcity of frozen fish caused by delays in shipment from Scandinavia, says the New York Times. Only a year ago, cheap frozen fish fillet was the subject of derisive jokes. Now restaurateurs boast that they have it.

In Tel Aviv, the police had to restore order among housewives fighting to get fish fillet. A crowd of angry fishmongers demanding supplies damaged a truck outside a cold-storage plant.

Government nutrition experts have noted a considerable decrease in animal protein, accompanied by a rise in carbohydrates in food consumption since the beginning of the year. Bread consumption was 20 per cent higher during this period than in the corresponding months of last year.

According to Mr. Eshkol, favorable weather will permit a tobacco crop of 4,500,000 kilograms (about 9,000,000 pounds), worth $3,000,000, or three times as much as last year. Prospects for fruit are also good, but it will be several

Author Of "Liliom" Was Famous Playwright, Journalist, And Wit

Ferenc Molnar, seventy-four, Hungarian playwright who wrote "Liliom," "The Guardsman," "The Play's The Thing" and a host of other plays and novels, died at Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, at the age of seventy-eight, after a brief illness. Mr. Molnar had lived at the Hotel Plaza since coming to the United States in 1940 from Geneva, where he had taken refuge after the Nazi infiltration of his native Budapest.

His family name was Neumann, but he changed it to Molnar as a gesture of patriotic assertion of nationalism. The perceptive, skillful writer became the second Jew in history to receive the Order of Corvin, the highest honor available to a Hungarian man of letters. He also wore the ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

He probably was best known to Americans for his play, "Liliom," which was made into a motion picture and presented on Broadway as "Carousel," a musical that opened April 19, 1945.

Immersed in the memory of Budapest's golden days, Mr. Molnar sought but never found in New York an equivalent for the city of his youth, says the New York Times. The tall, white-haired gentleman was a familiar figure around Central Park South and neighborhood restaurants, where he was a prodigious conversationalist. Although he had become a U.S. citizen, the Hungarian Molnar, as he was often called, often reminisced fondly about his old Budapest.

The writer, who turned out more than forty stage plays, felt that to become successful in the theatre "you must do some swindling." He explained that "sometimes it is just cheating your conscience or compromising with your values, but it is swindling, nevertheless." In life, he added, "you eat well or sleep well, you can't do both."

His reputation for frugality probably stemmed from his failure to realize the value of his works in dollars. It was said that for many years he charged a fixed fee of $21,000 for foreign film rights. From "Liliom" he made $50,000, including only $800 for the motion-picture rights. From "Carousel" he received $600 a week.

His plays did not strive for the social and political tones heard in the works of many of his contemporaries in the Hungarian theatre after World War I. His plays were notable for their wit, delicacy and sophistication and were primarily intended to be entertaining. They were good theatre and were played the world over, even being translated into Japanese.

But the day and age in which the bulk of Mr. Molnar's plays were written was a far different one from the dozen years he passed in America. He was a somewhat lonely figure in the Plaza and its immediate neighborhood, while in his native Hungary he was being called an "imperialist" and "Western author" and his books were sent to be made into waste paper along with those of Kipling and Maugham.

In the earlier, happier days in Budapest, he had been one of the leading lights of the Hungarian literary world. "Molnar's Gang," sometimes called "The New York Crowd," gathered at a table in Budapest's capacious New York Cafe, in the way members of the Roundtable Alexander Woolcott's crowd gathered at the Algonquin Hotel in New York. Mr. Molnar, an imposing personage, and a raconteur with an acerbic wit, was in many ways a kindred personality to Mr. Woolcott. He was an arbiter of mood and style and his criticisms could often help make or break a man's work.

Mr. Molnar wrote "Liliom" at a table in the New York Cafe, working nights for three weeks while the cafe's military band blared away in the background. His habit of working this way stemmed from the days as a newspaper man. When he finished his chores at the newspaper at 4 a.m., he would go to a restaurant to write away at his short stories, books and plays until 9, when he would go home to bed.

Born January 12, 1878, the son of a successful physician named Neumann, Mr. Molnar began a career in law as a student at the Royal Hungarian University of Science and later studied at the University of Geneva. While at the Royal Hungarian University he contributed a piece on criminal law and statistics to "Pesti Hirlap," a Hungarian political paper, and then began to write verse and stories for other papers. Later, while studying in Geneva, he was a correspondent for Budapest papers and made such a success that he gave up the law and returned to Hungary to give all his time to journalism, says the Herald Tribune.

Mr. Molnar was a newspaper man twenty-two years. He wrote a witty column for "Pesti Hirlap" and covered nearly every kind of news except politics and drama. His short stories, novels and plays were a by-product of his newspaper work. His first books, collections of short stories, passed almost unnoticed. But "The Hungry Town," a novel of Budapest, brought him into the public eye. His popularity was enhanced by later stories and his first comedies, "The Doctor" and "Jossie."

"The Doctor" was written in 1902 and started him on a playwriting career that was rare in the modern theatre because of its continued inclination toward self-examination. Autobiographical playwriting, uncommon to the modern stage, became Mr. Molnar's trademark largely, some biographers decided, because his own life had become so involved in the theatre that he could not keep it out of the plays he wrote about his native city, its theater and the people in them.

"Liliom," Mr. Molnar's greatest play, is considered by some to be another indication of the playwright's tendency toward self-analysis. The character of Liliom has been said to represent Mr. Molnar himself and shows the warring elements of his personality. When first produced in 1909 "Liliom" was not a success with Budapest audiences, but two years later a Viennese troupe produced it in German with great success and the play has since assumed classic proportions, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

"Liliom" was first presented in New York by the Theatre Guild in 1921 with Joseph Schildkraut and Eva LaGallienne. It was revived in New York in 1932 and again in 1940, with Burgess Meredith and Ingrid Bergman. In 1946 Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d turned the play into the musical, "Carousel."

"The Guardsman," first presented in New York in 1924 with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, was revived for a summer tour in 1951 by Jeanette McDonald and Gene Raymond.

Among Mr. Molnar's other plays were "The Devil," which in 1908 was played in New York simultaneously by four companies; "Playing With Fire," "The Red Mill," "The Swan," "The Good Fairy," "The Glass Slipper," "Fashions for Men," "Husbands and Lovers," "Mina," "The Phantom Rival," "Where Ignorance Is Bliss," "Intermezzo in the Office" and "Great Love."

Eighteen of Mr. Molnar's plays have been seen in New York, several of them having been revived frequently. Two new plays, produced after he came to the United States, were "Delicate Story" and "Miracle in the Mountains," neither of which was a success. He was last represented on the New York stage in 1944 with a revival of "The Play's The Thing," with Louis Calhern and Fay Emerson.

Mr. Molnar married three times. His first wife was Margit Vezsi by whom he had a daughter, his only child. The marriage ended in divorce as did his marriage to Sari Frodak, an operatic star. In 1926, he married Lili Darvas, a Hungarian actress who appeared on the American stage and in films. She survives him, with his daughter, three grandchildren, grandchildren, and a great-grandchild.

Jewish Agency To Repatriate Jews Of India, Unhappy In Israel

A statement by the Jewish Agency for Palestine, commented on a Tel Aviv dispatch in The New York Times telling of the dissatisfaction of a group of Indian Jews due to return to India. The statement, issued from the Agency's New York office, said the complaint of the dissatisfied Indian Jews that they were "middle-class" people in India but only "laborers" in Israel was "the core of the issue."

"Israel requires pioneers," the statement asserted. "Most of the newcomers to Israel are middle-class people and all are directed to pioneering unless they possess technological skills badly needed by the country."

"Since its beginning, Zionism has stressed that it was the obligation of all newcomers to the country to adjust themselves to its needs, and its greatest needs are agricultural pioneering, road construction, building. The early Zionist pioneers abandoned academic careers to become drainers of swamps and cultivators of the soil. There is a total of 3,000 immigrants from India and all, with the exception of this group of 160, are satisfied to remain in the country and are settled in towns and villages."

In the dispatch in The Times a spokesman for the dissatisfied Indian Jews in Israel said, "Our ladies are gentle. No good in queues. They don't argue — they go home and cry." The Jewish Agency statement commented in this connection:

"It is unfortunate, but conditions in Israel now require all housewives, and men, to stand in queues. This applies to persons in all stations of life, including the wife of the Prime Minister of Israel."

"The complaining group seems to be caste-conscious and tends to ascribe every normal difficulty to 'racial discrimination.' There is, of course, no racial or color discrimination in Israel. Indeed, more than 35 per cent of the Israeli population consists of Jews from Oriental countries, and the future immigration schedules of the Jewish Agency for Palestine provide for an additional mass immigration of Jews from these countries."

The Jewish Agency announced in Tel Aviv that it would repatriate 125 Indian Jewish immigrants after the group, which had staged a sit-down strike outside the agency's headquarters last December, returned and resumed the strike last week.

An Agency spokesman, who explained that in the case of these Indian Jews Israeli authorities had been unable to overcome "cultural absorption difficulties," and the Indians belonged to Beni Israel, a group that has been in India perhaps as long as 2,000 years and was "more detached from Judaism than practically any other Jewish community."

Despite the Agency's agreement to repatriate them, the 125 Indians settled down for the night on the sidewalks outside Agency headquarters after their committee of six had failed to reach agreement with the Agency on two lesser points, says the New York Times.

First, the Agency rejected their demand for board and lodging pending repatriation and the Indians rejected the Agency's proposal that they return to camps at Beersheba or Migdal Gad, where Mrs. Max Wolman, de la Savanne Avenue, entertained about twenty guests at a tea for Miss Sadie Zadanofsky, daughter of Mrs. B. Zadanofsky, Marquette Street, and the late Solomon Zadanofsky, whose marriage to Jack Wolman, brother-in-law of the hostess, and son of Mrs. Sarah Wolman, Hutchison Street, and the late Reuben Wolman, will take place on May 26, at Beth Yehuda Synagogue. The hostess wore a steel-grey taffeta dress, with a stand-up collar, and full skirt. Miss Zadanofsky wore printed white crepe, trimmed with black taffeta. Fashioned with a shawl collar, cut to a point at one side, and fastened with a rhinestone pin, the dress had short sleeves, and a slim skirt; and was worn with a white straw hat, trimmed with black taffeta. The honoree was presented with a dinner-set service for twelve. Roses, tulips, and gladioli decorated the tea table.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Wigdor, Redfern Avenue, returned home from Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Brody, of Boston, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. J. Brody, of Picton, N. S., were present at the marriage of Miss June Elyne Wilanski, daughter of Mrs. Harold Charles Wilanski, Sherbrooke Street West, and the late Mr. Wilanski, to Philip Prager Dine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dine, of Brookline, Mass., which took place on April 8, in the Blue Room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin J. Kaganov, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are spending the Passover holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Becker, Victoria Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris H. Levy, Summerhill Avenue, are visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert David Gale, of Long Island, N. Y., for the holidays.

Dr. Paul Nihoff, Cote des Neiges Road, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Nihoff, of Sherbrooke, for the holiday.

Mrs. Nina Sourkes, Atwater Avenue, will be present at the testimonial dinner to be given by Amvets of America, on April 21, at the Hotel Aster in New York, to honor her nephew, Dr. Arthur S. Abramson, of White Plains, as "Amvet's Man Of The Year".

Mrs. Rilda Stuart, Western Avenue, returned from Miami Beach, Florida, where she spent five months.

Mrs. A. Gulleroff returned, having visited her son, Sydney Gulleroff, in Los Angeles, Calif., for the winter; and is with her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Lyon Bercovitch, Sherbrooke Street West.

I. Glickman, Sherbrooke Street West, returned from Miami Beach, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Becker, Victoria Avenue, have visited their son for the holiday, Mr. and Mrs. H. Kaganov and daughter, Miss Etta Kaganov, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Maris, Lansdowne Avenue, spent a holiday at Nassau, the Bahamas.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goldstein,

Victoria Avenue, are back from Miami Beach, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Karsenski, Victoria Avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Phil. Linder, Villeneuve Street West, gave a cocktail party at the home of the former, in honour of their cousin, Miss Bertha Schachter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel M. Schachter, of Vancouver, B. C., and fiancée of Abe Stein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stein, of Montreal. Mrs. Karsenski wore a green silk dress; Mrs. Linder, a navy-blue silk dress, with white pique trimming; and Miss Schachter wore a light green silk shantung dress. There was table centerpiece of red tulips. A presentation of silver flatware was made. Miss Norma Schachter, sister of the honoree, was present. The marriage will take place in Vancouver, in August.

Dr. and Mrs. Oscar Nutik, 409 Clarke Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Stephen Lawrence, who was called to the Reading of the Law at Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue. He is the brother of Allen and Gordon; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. W. Gradinger, Prud'homme Avenue; and of Mr. and Mrs. O. Nutik, Sherbrooke Street West. Kiddush was observed; and there was an evening reception. The following day, at a luncheon, about twenty boys, friends of Stephen Lawrence, were present. Here for the occasion were: Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Gradinger, and daughter, Carolyn, and son, Barry; and Dr. and Mrs. S. Gradinger and daughter, Lynn Sari, all of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. and Mrs. B. L. Children's Camp

THOUGHTFUL PARENTS

Camp Rondax Lake offers a progressive, well-regarded camp programme for boys and girls 4-17 years. Rondax is situated at Old Forge, New York, in the Adirondacks, in an area free from hay fever. The camp was established by Louis Kantor, a noted educator and well-known camper. Mr. Kantor felt the need for a camping programme with the emphasis on cultural values. Music, art, drama and better are taught by teachers of distinction. A healthy outdoor life including riding, land and water sports and swimming, is further enriched by occasional trips away from camp. Last summer the entire camp travelled through the beautiful Adirondacks, visiting White Face Mountain, Avalanche Gorge, and Lake Placid, and a group spent several days in Montreal, where they were received by the Mayor of City Hall.

Rondax believes in a relaxed, well-rounded programme, which is carefully tailored to the camper — to his or her individual abilities, interests and needs. Careful attention is given to physical care with a resident physician and registered nurse in charge of a well-equipped infirmary. Meals are of a standard seldom found away from home.

Marion Beck, of the Canadian Magazine, visited the camp last year. We are highly proud of her report, highly praising Rondax's achievement in modern camping. Rondax pledges itself to continue to provide the very finest in leadership, instruction and wholesome recreation for your children.

Perhaps you would like to see the Camp movies without obligation, or would like more information. Simply call or write:

TORONTO MARRIAGES

LANDE-FREEMAN

The marriage of Betty Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Freeman, 73 Strathearn Road, to Bernard Zion Lande, son of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Lande, of Denver, Colorado, took place on January 5, at half-past eight o'clock, at Beth Shalom Synagogue, with Rabbi David Monson officiating, assisted by Cantor M. S. Oppenheim. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white Italian silk tulle. It had a stand-away collar, long lily-pointed sleeves, torso-length scalloped bodice, and pleated skirt that fell to a long train. The hand-made lace veil, embroidered with roses, which the bride bought in Venice on her recent trip to Europe, was draped over tulle illusion, and caught to a tiny peaked satin cap, and she carried white stephanotis backed with a green lily. Miss Rickie Gershenovitz was maid of honour, in a green satin gown, fashioned the same as the bride's. She had white feathers on one side of her head, and carried an arrangement of white carnations, tied with white wire and green ribbon. Jerry Lande, of Denver, Colorado, the groom's brother, was best man. The ushers were: David Deitz, of Newark, Conn.; Jack Marcus, and Harold Lande, the groom's brother, of Denver, Colorado; and David Freeman, the bride's brother. The candlelight ceremony took place against a background of giant white chrysanthemums backed with ferns. The standards of white candles were tied with ribbons and bunches of green and white flowers. Israel musical selections, favourites of the bride and groom, were played on the organ by Eric Schaeffer, during the ceremony. The bride's mother wore a ballerina-length off-the-shoulder gown of hyacinth-blue moire, trimmed in beige net, with matching feather cloche, having a veil studded in pearl-beads and rhinestones, hyacinth-blue pumps, beige gloves, and corsage of pink Pinocchio roses. The groom's mother was in a charcoal-grey lace cocktail gown, made with beaded sweetheart neckline, veiled, purple beaded hat, and purple orchid corsage. For the trip to Elkhart, Mississippi, and New Orleans, the bride left in a beige suit designed with cocoa-coloured latticed pockets, cocoa-coloured hat trimmed in pearls, matching accessories, and beaver coat. The couple are residing in Denver, Colorado. Out-of-town wedding guests were: Mrs. E. Silverberg, Mr. and Mrs. J. Marcus, of Denver, Colorado; Mr. and Mrs. F. Kaplan, of Chelsea, Mass.; Mrs. F. Lifshitz, of New York; and Miss Judy Kaplan, of Cambridge, Ohio.

LUBIN SILVERMAN

The marriage of Charlotte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Silverman, 1046 St. Clair Avenue West, to Irving Harry Lubin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Lubin, 727 Champagne Avenue, Montreal, Que., took place at five o'clock, on Sunday, March 23, at Borochoy Centre; Rabbi David Monson officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a gown of ice-blue satin which was made with a round lace neckline, short capelet sleeves, with long matching gloves, and bouffant skirt terminating in a long circular train. A bonnet-shaped headpiece of ice-blue satin, trimmed with seed-pearl beads around the edge, held her fingertip tulle illusion veil, and she carried a crescent-shaped bouquet of Easter lilies, stephanotis, and hyacinth petals. Mrs. Leo Posner, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the bride's sister, was matron of honour, in a dusty-pink taffeta gown of redingote style, with low neckline, cap sleeves, and matching gloves; also a braided hand headpiece, trimmed with tulle; and her bouquet was of spring flowers. Miss Sybil Lubin, of Montreal, the groom's sister, was maid of honour, wearing a strapless blue net gown over taffeta, having a full skirt, and matching stole; also a braided hand headpiece, trimmed in tulle; and carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers. David Schacter was best man and the ushers were: Harold Mandelker, Max Grossman, and Aaron Baylin, all of Montreal, Quebec. The canopy was decorated with a variety of spring flowers. Miss Shirley Coblenz, of Detroit, Mich., sang "Through The Years" during the ceremony. The bride's mother wore a peach-blue crepe gown, fashioned with high neckline, having a lace yoke, embroidered with beads; also long white gloves, small matching hat, trimmed with white flowers, and corsage of Amazon lilies and hyacinth petals. The groom's mother was in a cocoa-coloured lace gown, its full skirt having a wide tulle insert; also matching gloves, a small flowered hat, trimmed in lace, and corsage of Tassman roses. For the trip to New York, the bride left in a navy-blue gabardine suit, with pink straw hat, matching accessories, and a Persian lamb coat. The couple will reside in Montreal. Out-of-town wedding guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Ben J. Cohen, Dr. I. Lubin, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lubin, David Schacter, Max Grossman, Aaron Baylin, Harold Mandelker, Misses Seela Nish and Frances Gitnick, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Greenberg, Miss Norma Greenberg, Ellis Adel, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Grossman, David Mason, all of Buffalo, N. Y.; S. Glazer, and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cohen, of Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Abe Nusbaum, of Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Posner, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. William Damsky, of Elmhurst, Long Island, N. Y.; Sydney Ganz, Miss Shirley Coblenz, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schwartz, of Canadigua,

N. Y.; and Mrs. H. Cohen, and Mrs. F. Silverstein, of Chatham.

GORDON-BOLTER

The marriage of Beverley, daughter of Mrs. S. Bolter, 229 Northcliffe Boulevard, and the late Hyman Bolter, to Robert Leonard Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gordon, 46 Wells Hill Avenue, took place on Tuesday, March 18, at half-past five o'clock, at Guel Tredeau Synagogue, with Rabbi Norman N. Shapiro and Rabbi Judah Washer officiating. The bride wore white nylon net and lace and walked down the aisle alone. Her gown was fashioned with low-cut, wide square neckline, the moulded bodice was embroidered in crystal and iridescent sequins, and had long pointed sleeves. The bouffant nylon skirt, over taffeta, had large sprays of crystals and iridescent sequins, was bound at the hemline in taffeta, and fell to a full, sweeping train. A lace bandeau, jewelled to match her gown, held the bride's fingertip tulle illusion veil, and she carried a small cascade of white orchids and white hyacinth bloom. Mrs. Gordon Spergel, the bride's sister, was matron of honour, in an organza gown of rose-shaded-to-turquoise, cut with portrait neckline, shirred bodice, and bouffant skirt. She had a matching headpiece, and carried a cascade of bronze-tinted carnations. Barbara Kirsh was flower girl, wearing a shell-pink organza dress, having lace inset on the short, full skirt, with white shoes and socks, and a matching net bunnet, and carried a nosegay of pink roses. Sydney Pollock was best man. The Synagogue was decorated with large standards of white snapdragons, and there were tall lighted candelabra along the aisles. White snapdragons adorned the canopy, and large white satin bows marked the rows of seats. At the dinner, the bride's mother received in a gown of beige chiffon over pink taffeta, having a square neckline, trimmed with matching sequins and crystals, and a matching stole; worn with a small hat, and corsage of green orchids. The groom's mother wore an aquamarine-blue sheer gown over taffeta, having a heavily beaded yoke of crystals and blue bugle beads, with matching stole; also a small beaded hat, and corsage of mauve orchids. For the trip to Nassau, Bahamas Islands, Bermuda, and Miami Beach, Florida, the bride left in a pink gabardine suit, with navy-blue accessories, pink jacket, and corsage of white orchids. The couple will reside at 2100 Bathurst Street.

Stove-pipe for Stakes

Over in another corner of the basement I spied a storage place for stakes. These had been used for dahlias and tomatoes, some of bamboo and others of cedar. Stove-pipes had been fastened to the wall with heavy wire, and the stakes stood upright to prevent them from falling all over the place.

Protection for Cheese

Invited to partake of a little hospitality I was interested to note how the folks protected the cheese. A new flower-pot had been soaked in water, then placed over the cheese to keep it from drying out, and to protect it from flies.

Small Tool Chest

The principal of a school nearby invited me into the manual training room. One of the junior pupils had constructed a very neat tool box from pieces of lath. Given a little extra touch this could have been converted into a fine box for gloves, ties or handkerchiefs.

I suppose we have all been reminded that it is good to store for a rainy day, and of course that means winter as well. This was brought very much to mind when travelling through the country recently, and inspecting equipment in a farm home.

Storage Bin

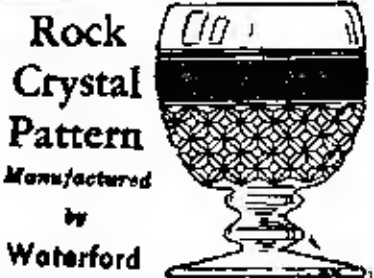

This farmer did not agree with the old type bin in the corner of the cellar, he had built an airy one for better results. The framework of the bin was out from the wall about three inches, firmly constructed with sliding shelves or trays for fruit, bulbs, and vegetables. Plenty of air worked up through the trays as each had a slat bottom. It is well to keep in mind that the room

THE IMPACT OF THE AGED ON THE COMMUNITY

Presented At The National Conference Of Jewish Social Workers
BY OLLIE A. RANDALL, COMMUNITY SERVICE SOCIETY, NEW YORK

The presence of millions of persons who can by one definition or another be classified as "the aged" in the national community has introduced a curious social paradox for us, as members of local communities, to attempt to resolve, whether that be as individuals, members of families, or as social workers.

In the aggregate, this segment of the population is of sufficient size to be without precedent in modern civilization. In its individual components are the elements of a problem which make for complexity for each of the human beings who constitute the group and for the community as a whole.

The problem has grown in volume and in the accumulation of complicated detail, until it is somewhat staggering to contemplate what is required to work out even partial solutions to it. One of the reasons for this is that throughout the years the prognostications of the demographers and the voices of the few hardy souls who tried to interpret these predictions, in terms of future human need, have been subjected to what the physicians call "inattention deafness" on the part of the lay public and professional personnel as well. Hence it is peculiarly gratifying that the actual significance of the tremendous social force of the population trend is finally receiving the attention it properly deserves.

The impact of the aged upon the community is no trivial matter, nor is it temporary in nature. The consequences of the impact are both far reaching and profound, and are being felt in every phase of life. Many of these are not within the scope of social work, but most of them account for the new emphases which will be the inevitable corollary in social work content and methodology.

For well over a quarter of a century, the indisputable evidence of this nation's aging population has been right before our eyes, and when it was less apparent there were the warnings of the informed and of what it portended for the future, which has by this date become the present.

We have had toward the problem an attitude which was a strange admixture of disinterest, fear, and ignorance, with its roots probably to be traced to the historical record of old age and of aged people as it has been written and known down through the centuries. Social workers who gave any thought to the problem of the old people were rank sentimentalists, or in the words of the French, "un peu loqué," motivated by kindness which had only a slightly tolerated place in the growing professionalism of our ranks in the twentieth century.

This country has, as roughly estimated, some eleven and a half million oldsters established in this category by what might be called "legislative fiat." These numbers are increasing annually at a pace which has never before been witnessed. At the same time the general trend in the size of the younger age groups is downward. With this combination of circumstances, there is logical basis for community concern as to the distribution of the aged and of the availability of services and facilities for them.

The paradox previously mentioned is that the individual person, in spite of the enormous stake the community has in the total group, has been deprived of practically every reason for existence. He is socially and economically displaced, retaining on the same terms as in earlier life only the right to exercise his franchise. Once older people begin to realize that the balance of civic power can be theirs, much will depend upon the kind of leadership and upon the kind of treatment accorded to them both as persons and as members of a "category."

This is reminiscent of the statement of Lloyd George who commented on Great Britain during her life and death struggle, that "the crucial test of the quality of a civilization is the way in which it treats its old people." It is, then, both social and economic protection to aim toward the decategorization of our elderly and to work toward their assimilation in the institutions of our democracy without too sharp differentiation from other citizens of other age groups.

It is no exaggeration to state that every person, every family, every aspect of living in a community, of whatever size or complexion, is influenced by the greater number of older people who are spinning out their life span beyond the years which they might reasonably have expected to attain, even so brief a time as twenty-five years ago. The social and economic machinery for coping with this fact is obsolete. Hence the added years become a problem rather than a blessing.

Perhaps the greatest obstacle to early solution of this problem is the fact that the vision of each of us is dimmed by the stubbornly persistent prejudices of yesterday, of an era which is past. There is as yet little adjustment either in our thinking or our feeling about old age and old people which takes into account the excellent work in this country by the pediatricians, by the nutritionists, the practicing physicians and surgeons.

This surely has operated to bring into being a race of older people who are harder than their predecessors of the same age, and all signs point to the probability that these people are not more the prototype of the old folks of tomorrow than they are representative of the stereotyped concept of oldsters by which they are still judged. The further complication of that paradox is that many of our old folks see themselves in that same dim light and accept the evaluation which others make of them without quarrel or defense, feeling helpless before such firmly entrenched ideas which determine not only their own personal behavior but the social behavior of others toward them.

Only recently is there a slight upsurge of optimism which is the delayed response to the valiant efforts of pioneers of earlier days to sweep away the cobwebs of indifference and tradition, and to conserve the human resources now so extravagantly discarded by a thoughtless, improvident citizenry. Therefore the first and most important impact of the aged toward the alleviation of which we as social workers should dedicate ourselves is that upon the aged individual himself.

This is peculiarly consonant with that principle of our profession which concedes that to assist the human being to realize as fully as possible the potentialities of his personality and to relate himself as effectively as possible to the environment in which he has his being is a primary responsibility for us. We are only just beginning to recognize and accept the application of this principle to our work with all persons, without respect to age.

If the individual is the atomic entity of society, then, the first social constellation or grouping of those atoms is the family, persons who are bound together by the ties of kinship and who consciously or unconsciously yield to the implications of this for their relationships with one another. The family as an institution is the primary unit of society for the preservation of mental health and for the maintenance of a well-balanced adjustment to the community.

It too is being quite seriously tested by the new requirement which an aging population is placing upon it. We have the assurance of the anthropologists and the sociologists that "the family," generically speaking, has withstood severe tests throughout all of history, and still has in it all that it needs for survival. But in modern times there is the unusual combination of urbanization, industrialization, and a growing crop of old people which has never been faced before.

The legal framework of our social legislation, the mores of a democratic society, and the cultural attitudes which are dominant in our life are all predicated upon social conditions which no longer exist. To bridge this gap between the so-called advances of civilization and the mores which obtain and which guide the behavior of most people is not a simple task, but it is one which will not wait upon our wishful thinking and one which is peculiarly ours, in large measure.

Dependency—in spite of the vast public assistance programs which have been set in motion—is still not respectable. If this be too dogmatic a statement to make, let me ask that each of you attune your ears to listen not to the words which are spoken, but to the subtle overtones or even the more obvious modulation of people's voices when the status of either an individual or of a family, changed from that of independence to dependency, is mentioned, with social workers no exception to the rule.

One of the most devastating effects of the impact of the aged is that such a great number of people among us—made up mainly of those who have been imbued for many years with the philosophy of a self-sufficient pioneering country—have been forced to accept dependency as society's only answer for them. That most of them have accepted this reluctantly, even bitterly, is a fact which has been demonstrated over and over again, the public press notwithstanding.

This necessity for receiving support from others, one's family, friends, or public or voluntary sources, does nothing to improve relationships between generations in a family group. It is rather the chief element in the stress and strain which so frequently results in the breakup of the family. And there is little in the climate of public opinion to minimize these difficulties, nor I regret to say, in the attitude of many workers in family agencies one of whose major tasks is to keep families together. They conceive the performance of this task as precluding physical separation, whereas experience is beginning to prove that spiritual unity, the most vital of family values, may often be preserved only by such separation.

It is the misapplication of fine old principles in an urbanized setting and in rural settings which may also be industrialized. Some of the tragedies of family life may be credited to unawareness that the economic possibilities of containing in one single family unit the essentials for the financial support and for the social effectiveness of all its members no longer exist for every family in the community.

To proclaim this publicly is to call down upon our heads the barrage of criticism that we believe in a "welfare state" in which individuals are robbed of all responsibility for themselves and for others. However, in business and industry, presumably the strongholds of conservatism, there is dawning a new comprehension of the burden which the aged now largely condemned to idleness and to dependency, are becoming, and of how intolerable that burden may soon be unless there are more positive approaches to the economic aspect of the problem.

While dependency has always been in such disrepute that it is an unwelcome status for almost anyone, idleness too, even for those who can well afford to maintain themselves in idleness, has never had the seal of unequivocal approval from a hard-working nation. While to be one of the "idle rich" may have been the secret dream of open ambition which lured the struggling citizen on toward material success, the realization of the goal has usually been the disappointing ash of a burning desire. With millions of older people consigned to inactivity and unproductiveness in a materially minded culture, without the means to support themselves, there is bound to be a drain upon the economic resources of the country which will ultimately prove to be too great.

Therefore there is a restless movement to try to discover how the capacities of these older people, legion in number, can be utilized for the common good without creating too severe competition with younger people who likewise must find places for themselves in the labor market.

Dr. Ewan Clague, U. S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics, as the result of his department's research, has indicated that the economy of the country must expand within the next ten years (he gives us no longer than that) so as to provide opportunities for employment for pay for those who can work, regardless of age. That is a mighty short period of time to make the radical adjustment which such a program demands, but the recent experience of the war years demonstrates that it can be done, if the will to do be there.

However brief a time it is for the economy, it is far too long for the members of the group of old people who are now being rejected by industry, some of them at the ridiculously low ages of 65 for women, and 65 for men. We are reaping at this very moment troubles growing from seeds planted during the depression twenty years ago, in many of the situations of older workers who suffered their first major defeat, employment wise, at that time.

History is repeating itself in exactly the same fashion. While we may not be in the depths of a depression, the results for those who cannot secure work and cannot therefore keep themselves employable or build up any kind of reserves, personal, financial or other, for that tomorrow twenty years from now are just the same. Yankee ingenuity is devising answers to some of the grave problems posed for us in the matter of public health and national and international security. It should be equal to the challenge of an aging population than which there is no greater before us and which is, after all, part and parcel of all the others.

The close correlation of ill health and dependency has long been known but methods of prevention of either are not yet known well enough or at least are not so capable of translation into personal and community action to have been effective for our old people. Many persons build a tolerance for a certain amount of chronic illness which does not too markedly interfere with productivity nor with normal activity at home or in the community.

However, invalidism and the crippling effects of some chronic ailments are of such a character that care and service are required almost constantly, and again the financial and social costs of long term illness with these elements as part of it are so great as to be prohibitive for most individuals and for most people. Acute illness for the elderly is today as treatable and often as curable as it is for younger people.

Presumably in the future chronic illness will have the same potentialities for control for both groups. But at this time, the community is literally staggering from the impact upon it of the chronically ill aged and the chronic invalids for whom facilities are neither adequate in quantity nor in quality. The chronic frustrations which everyone feels as the result of such limitations upon well meaning efforts to serve sick old people contribute to the pessimistic attitudes toward older people which are so prevalent, and which, may I add, are indeed understandable.

Much as I deplore the lack of facilities and of services, strategically located and moderately satisfactory, I am inclined to think that had we had what we were convinced we needed, we might never have progressed so far in the raising of standards of physical facilities and of professional services. In this sense, there is more than a grain of truth in the phrase which I have quoted to you and to others so often because of its special aptness: "unattainable to longevity."

These old people whose suffering, whose discomfort, and whose lack of care provoke us to continued dissatisfaction and thinking, and at long last, to action, are the ones to whom the credit for any improvement really belongs. Had they been safely and easily disposed of in public or private homes, nursing homes, because the beds were there, our public and our professional consciences would have been much less troubled.

As it is, infirmity and hospital care has become a national issue of huge proportion. And home medical care programs are being developed which are both more humane and equally sound medically for the patient. To deal with a situation of such huge size on a basis which must, in the last analysis, serve the individual patient where he is, and as he is, stirs the imagination and is conducive to calling into play all the skills which can be commandeered.

In the organization of home medical care, and in the actual operation of such a service, the goal is undoubtedly better care for the patient, first, and better use of hospital equipment and facilities, second, in the light of the presumed shortages which plague us so continually. But to me one of the most important by-products -- and it is almost too important to nominate it as a by-product -- is the teamwork of the several professional disciplines which becomes a reality and ceases to be something about which we talk much and do little.

Inherent in satisfactory experience with such programs are the possibilities of sharing more fully on a partnership basis the knowledge and skills peculiar to each of the professions involved, including those of the family, which we are so apt to forget, so that none of them needs to be called by the other "secondary personnel" as one physician recently named everyone engaged in medical work with older people except the physician, or practicing physician. One of the effects of the impact of the aged on the community will be this acceptance of the need to work with the whole patient, not his diseases, and of the social factors in a patient's situation as contributing to, or militating against, his improvement or recovery.

We have hardly progressed beyond the threshold of understanding in this aspect of our common work, but we have every reason to believe that the door is opening upon just as exciting new worlds here as are those which have been revealed through the work of the physical scientists. Human beings are a fairly common commodity, but strange as it may seem, they are, by and large, the least known and the least understood commodity with which we have to deal. That more and more of them survive to old age merely adds to the challenge to medicine, psychiatry, and to the betterment of human relations.

The usual criticism leveled at anyone who discusses such programs as home medical care, which seems to be dependent upon urban location for their success, is that the rural areas in which there is dearth of both facilities and services are totally ignored in this kind of planning. But here too are fascinating possibilities in the public health services which are providing not only more adequate visiting personnel but the organization of new clinics for administration of the so-called multi-phase screening tests.

These are not diagnostic, but are tests which are administered to large groups of persons to detect the presence or absence of diseases so far as that can be determined by such tests. On the basis of findings, individuals are as a follow-up referred to physicians for careful diagnosis and treatment, if indicated. The multi-phase character of the tests, in my lay understanding of it, is taken to mean that if, for example, blood is taken for tests the blood is subjected to a series of tests rather than being used for a simple blood count or to determine the presence of blood sugar.

Those who require food with a high iron content will find that the variety meats supply the mineral needed for good red blood. Liver, kidney, tongue and heart are all rich and are more economical to buy. Dried fruits such as apricots, raisins, or prunes, are also useful and tasty sources of this important mineral.

WAS KNOWN AS OWNER OF FAMOUS CAFE

Benjamin H. Fogelman, widely known as the owner of "Benny the Bum's," a Central City Cafe, in Philadelphia, Pa., died there in St. Joseph's Hospital at the age of 49. With money saved as a newsboy, door-to-door peddler and cab driver, Mr. Fogelman opened his first restaurant at 22. Though the years he became acquainted with thousands of celebrities who visited his places.

His reputation became widespread before the Thirties, when he operated the Epicure as a club, admitting only those persons whom he knew and their guests. At that time, according to his own story, he was telling the late Heywood Brown, New York newspaper columnist, how in his boyhood days he was known all over the neighborhood as "Benny the Bum."

"Why," suggested Mr. Brown, "don't you change the name of this place to Benny the Bum's?" The next day, Mr. Fogelman changed the name. Since 1940, his establishment has been situated at 1321 Locust Street. Surviving are his widow, Irene; a son, Alvin; a daughter, Helena; his mother, two brothers; and three sisters.

THREE FAITHS ANSWER APPEAL FOR PIANO

When St. Patrick's Home for the Aged, 66 Van Cortlandt Park South, the Bronx, N.Y., asked friends for a piano, the response produced offers of a dozen pianos and a three-part harmony. A Protestant, Jewish and Catholic groups in the Bronx City College sent one piano to St. Patrick's Home. A few days later, five nuns from the institution won a new instrument and $500 on a radio quiz show after their appearance had been arranged by a member of the Van Cortlandt Jewish Center.

A third piano received by the home has been given to the Van Cortlandt Jewish Center, which celebrated its fifth anniversary. Many of the 160 residents of St. Patrick's Home and members of the Bedford Park Presbyterian Church helped to observe the center's anniversary.

Fish, one of Canada's natural resources, is a valuable food, providing proteins, calcium, phosphorus and other minerals and vitamins. It should be eaten all year around, fresh, canned, frozen or smoked.

Now that spring is on its way, the out-of-doors is getting more appealing. Walking home at least part of the way from work or school is healthy and fresh air is beneficial to lungs, muscles and complexion.

3 good reasons why

1 it's the best coffee you will ever taste
There's a full richness of flavour in every cup of NESCAFE. That's why more people, the world over, drink NESCAFE than all other instant coffees combined.

2 it saves you so much money
It's a premium coffee, always fresh and full of flavour. Yet NESCAFE will save you up to 40c a pound over regular coffee.

3 it's easy to prepare
Quick as the kettle boils, you can have satisfying, invigorating coffee. Make it in the cup or coffee-server. Just use one teaspoonful of NESCAFE for each cup desired, add boiling hot water and your coffee is ready.

NESCAFE

the finest cup of coffee you ever tasted

NESCAFE (pronounced NESCAFAY) is the exclusive registered Trade Mark of Nestlé's Milk Products (Canada) Limited, a subsidiary of Nestlé's Milk Products Ltd. It is composed of equal parts of pure soluble coffee and instant pure milk powder (dextrose, maltose and sucrose) added solely to prevent the curdling.

CLASS IN COOKERY

PASSOVER MARBLE CAKE

Separate yolks and whites of ten eggs. Beat the yolks, add one-quarter glass of sugar, and beat until fluffy. Beat the egg-whites until stiff and dry; add one glass of sugar to whites, and continue beating. Then fold beaten whites together with the beaten yolks. Sift three-quarters glass of cake meal; add two teaspoons potato flour, and sift together. Fold into combined egg mixture. Add one tablespoon of cold water mixed with one tablespoon of oil. The dough should be mixed slowly and carefully. Grease a sponge cake tin; line with waxed paper; and place in a 300-degree oven, gradually raising heat to 400 degrees. Bake cake altogether, for three-quarters of an hour or an hour. For a marble cake, add one teaspoon of cocoa to several tablespoons of the dough, and mix it in slowly, and then add a little at a time to rest of dough as it is being poured into cake-tin.

SPEEDY MATZOH BALLS

one egg
salt to taste

three to four heaping teaspoons matzoh meal to one egg.

Break egg into bowl. Fill each half of egg shell with cold water, and add to egg; then add salt, and beat well. Add matzoh meal gradually, stirring constantly, then more salt to taste. Mixture should be quite loose. Dip teaspoon into boiling chicken soup (which is enough for serving two, for this recipe), then fill with mixture, and drop into soup. Dip teaspoon into soup after each addition. Matzoh balls will float on top. Cook from five to ten minutes until balls become fluffy.

74 Robina Avenue, Toronto.

PASSOVER COTTAGE CHEESE KNAIDLACH

one-half pound cottage cheese

one-quarter cup matzoh meal

one-half level teaspoon salt

three beaten eggs

one tablespoon sugar

Mash cottage cheese well; add eggs, and beat; add remaining ingredients; and form into a paste. Shape into balls; and drop into a quart of water which has been brought to a boil. Cook for five minutes, drain off water, and pour melted butter over the knaidlach.

Mrs. M. Coganovitch,

5852 Dolbeau Avenue, Montreal.

PASSOVER MATZOH MEAL PANCAKES

one-half cup matzoh meal
two eggs, separated

one cup water
one teaspoon salt

one tablespoon sugar

Mix matzoh meal, salt, and sugar. Beat egg yolks, add water; and combine with mixed dry ingredients. Let mixture stand for about twenty minutes; then fold in the two egg-whites, which have been stiffly beaten. Drop by tablespoons onto well-oiled frying-pan; and when pancakes have bubbled, turn over, and brown on other side. Serve with jam.

4870 Fulton Avenue, Montreal.

PASSOVER CAKE SQUARES

one cup oil
four eggs
one cup sugar

one cup matzoh meal
grated rind of one-half lemon

one cup ground walnuts

Beat eggs; add oil and sugar; then walnuts, and matzoh meal; and grated lemon rind. Beat well; pour into greased cake tin, and bake in a moderate oven, of 350 degrees, until golden brown. Cut in squares when it is cool.

8035 Dolbeau Avenue, Montreal.

PASSOVER SWEET POTATO PUDDING

six sweet potatoes
one-half cup sugar
three tablespoons chicken fat

one-half cup matzoh meal
one-half pound prunes
one cup water
one-quarter cup sugar

three eggs

Cook prunes with one-quarter cup sugar; and one cup water, until soft. When cool, remove pits. Cook potatoes in jackets in salted water; and when cooked, drain off water, and run cold water over potatoes. Peel, then mash, adding sugar and matzoh meal, and eggs, one at a time. Add chicken fat; and mix well. Heat a greased funnel pan. Place half of potato mixture in pan; put prunes on top; and cover with remaining potato mixture. Bake in a 350 degree oven until golden brown. Turn upside down on platter; and place contrasting-coloured vegetables in the centre.

 HOSPITAL OF HOPE: Jack R. Engante, Q.C., in his presidential report at the tenth annual meeting of the institution said that there were 75 patients at the hospital on December 31, representing an increase of 30% over the previous year, and that the deficit of $85,468.06 was due primarily to the fact that the institution accommodates so many indigent patients. H. Geitler, honorary treasurer, submitted a financial statement for 1951. The expenses were $160,401.78 and the operating income was $34,928.12, leaving a deficit of $85,468.66. The expenses represented an increase of $27,748.70 or 17% over that of 1950. Dr. J. Kaufman, chairman of the Medical Board, said: "There are few institutions that welcome the chronically ill patients. The Jewish Hospital of Hope has carried the torch, shown the light and set an example in the community that it may well be proud of. In the few years of its existence the hospital has achieved wonderful success." Mrs. S. Cohen, president of the Council of Units; W. V. Victor, and M. Ginsburg spoke. The following were elected to fill vacancies on the Board of Trustees: I. Auerbach, I. Boek, M. Browns, P. Caplan, M. Coperberg, I. Davine, A. Feldman, L. Liebman, A. Papernuan, I. Simpson, M. M. PEPPER STEAK WITH PAN-FRIED NOODLES

Cut one and one-half pounds shoulder steak in one-third inch cubes. Saute one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons chopped onion and one clove garlic, minced, in two tablespoons oil. Slowly brown cubed steak in pan. Add one cup chicken broth; cover; cook slowly for ten minutes. Add one large green pepper, diced; and one and one-half cups diced celery. Continue to cook for about five minutes, covered, over low heat. Blend two tablespoons cornstarch with two teaspoons soy sauce; and mix in one-quarter-cup cold water, until mixture is smooth. Then add it to meat mixture, and cook until sauce is thick, stirring constantly. Pour over noodles, and serve. To prepare noodles, saute two cups fine noodles, which have been cooked, drained and chilled, sauteing in pan with three tablespoons oil. This recipe serves four.

Morris Moscovitch was elected to head the second Joint Campaign for the Combined Jewish Appeal and the United Israel Appeal, scheduled to be held this fall. He succeeds Dr. George Strean, 1951 chairman, who led the first joint effort for the CJA and UIA to within six percent of its record-high goal of $2,751,600 last November. The elections took place at the annual meeting of the Business Men's Council, in the Jewish Community Services Building. Although the objectives for the 1952 drive have not yet been set, the campaign dates are October 30 to November 13. The Joint Campaign will hold a one-week cash collection program, starting on Monday, April 14, to clean up outstanding pledges owed to the 1951 drive and to clear the way for the campaign in November. The collection committee, headed by Abe Brofman, treasurer of the Combined Jewish Appeal, is comprised primarily of divisional leaders in the Joint Campaign. They are prepared to follow up the "C Week" announcements with personal contacts. The slogan for "C Week" is "Your Pledge is Hope, but Your Cash is Life." The Cash Collection week was organized because of steadily increasing demands from Israel and local and overseas agencies for immediate cash to carry on the day-to-day work supported by the campaign. Pledges are generally paid over a yearly period but it is hoped that because of this appeal, an especially large cash collection will be made by the end of Passover.

ISRAEL PINS HOPE

years before the effect of this year's large-scale planting of citrus saplings, grapevines and banana, olive and deciduous fruit trees is felt. To enable the Israelis to make the most of their good crops, Bruce McDaniel, United States technical cooperation administrator, has included in his latest recommendations for the release of aid funds $2,158,000 for seeds, fertilizers and plant-protection supplies such as sprays. The rest of the $14,543,000, the release of which he has recommended, will be divided among petroleum products, fodder, wheat and other food stuffs.

With the expenditure of these sums, Israel will have used up more than half of her $50,000,000 in refugee relief and resettlement funds. However, she has not yet used any of the $15,000,000 allocated to her for technical and economic assistance. An agreement between Israel and the United States covering the use of the latter funds has not yet been concluded, according to the New York Times.

Further good economic news for Israel was the arrival of Dr. Walter Fehr, noted Swiss geologist. He will direct oil prospecting on behalf of a group backed by a combination of Swiss, United States and Israeli funds as soon as Parliament has adopted a law regulating oil prospecting. Dr. Fehr, who formerly was employed by the Iraq Petroleum Company, said the heavy bituminous-type oil probably would be found, but he warned not to expect positive results for two years.

JEWISH AGENCY

they would have to work for board and lodging until they left. Second, the Indians rejected the Agency's offer to send 100 of them to Bombay aboard passing commercial planes. They insisted on remaining together.

About twenty-five of the Indians in five families remained in Beersheba, having adjusted themselves with the help of Jewish Agency officials, who devoted special attention to the group after the December demonstration. At that time the Indians charged that they had been lured to Israel by false promises of a good life, had been obliged to do heavy manual labor instead of following traditional trades and had been subjected to discrimination as "blacks."

Agency officials persuaded them to return to Beersheba with the promise that they would be sent back to India if their problems had not been solved after two months. The Agency spokesman explained that the delay in returning them was caused by the necessity of getting their papers in order. Many had lost or abandoned their Indian passports, while others were from Pakistan and wanted to return to India.

This group of 125 is part of a Bnei Israel community of 450 in Israel. Altogether there are about 2,400 Indian Jewish immigrants in Israel. The others belong to a Cochin Jewish group that has been in India nearly as long as Bnei Israel, Baghdad Jews who went there about three generations ago and European Jews who went in this century.

TENENBAUM-KLEIN

The marriage of Gloria, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klein, 115 Braemore Gardens, to Nathan Tenenbaum, son of J. Tenenbaum, 156 Major Street, took place on March 23, at half-past five o'clock, at 396 College Street, with Rabbi Bernard Rosenzweig officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her white ankle-length gown was fashioned with a Queen Anne collar, long sleeves, and full net skirt over satin, with insets of lace. Her high, beaded, long crown was arranged with a fingertip tulle illusion veil, and she carried a white Bible adorned with a mauve orchid and long white streamers. Mrs. Lester Hollinger, the bride's sister, was matron of honour. In a steel-grey strapless ankle-length gown, having a beaded top and full skirt, with matching attached stole, she had grey velvet flowers in her hair, and carried a nosegay of red roses and carnations. John Tenenbaum, the groom's brother, was best man. Jack Berla sang "Because" during the ceremony. The bride's mother wore an ankle-length gown of beige crepe, made with low neckline, lace bodice, three-quarter-length sleeves, and draped skirt, with corsage of red and white roses. Mrs. J. Tenenbaum was in a black crepe ankle-length gown, having a red Peter Pan collar, three-quarter-length sleeves, straight skirt, and corsage of red roses. For the motor trip to Miami Beach, Florida, the bride left in a grey and white checked gabardine suit, with rust-coloured coat, matching accessories, and mauve orchid corsage. They will reside at 1554 Bathurst Street. Out-of-town wedding guests were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Tenenbaum and son, Allan, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. S. Price, of Detroit, Mich.

According to the Arab News Agency, Dr. Fadil Al-Jamali, President of the Iraqi Chamber of Deputies, in a statement to the press accused every Arab who called for reconciliation with Israel of treachery, warning the Arab peoples against what he describes as "the propaganda for the circulation of the idea of peace and reconciliation." Says Dr. Al-Jamali: "Israel tries every now and then to feel the pulse of the Arabs and works to weaken their will and break their nerve by buying the conscience of some of the sons of the Arab nations." Reconciliation with Israel, in his view, means opening the gates of the Arab countries to Jewish domination in conduct, politics and economics, and would submit the entire Arab world to terrible peril.

"Moses" by Sholem Asch

"And there hath not arisen a Prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, Whom the Lord knew face to face." (Deut. 34:10)

It is most appropriate when we commence reading the third book of Moses that we discuss "Moses", by Sholem Asch. There is no doubt that there is abroad in the land a spiritual nostalgia. This explains why so many novels of a religious nature have occupied during the last decade the best seller list. There is no doubt that men and women in our time are lived of things and more things and that there is a hunger of soul and heart.

Such books as "The Joseph Stories" by Thomas Mann; the works of our own friend of blessed memory, Lloyd Douglas, and others, have come to occupy a most unique place in the literature of our day. Sholem Asch is keenly sensitive to the times with its spiritual longing and hence he, as a master writer, has given us such works as "The Nazarene"; "The Apostle"; and now turns to the very source of great religion, that of "The Exodus", the outgoing of Israel from Egypt, under the leadership of Moses.

The history of ancient Egypt divides itself into three Kingdoms. The old Kingdom comes to a close in the year 2500 B.C.E.; the Middle Kingdom, 2500 B.C.E. — 1587 B.C.E.; and the last Kingdom, that of 1587 B.C.E. — 1100 B.C.E. The biblical story centers about the Middle Kingdom, at the time when the Hyksos, a tribe from Arabia invaded Egypt and continued to build the pyramids and continued the great tradition of Egyptian civilization. Biblical scholars agree that Joseph no doubt co-operated with one of the Hyksos' kings and the Israelites found themselves in Egypt when Ramesses II (1300 to 1234) was the Pharaoh of Egypt.

The Exodus itself in all probability took place when the son of Ramesses II was the ruling Pharaoh. But what is strange in Egyptian history is that no mention is made of Israel's outgoing from Egypt, even as there is no mention made of the conquest of Egypt by the Hyksos. This is easily explained. Oriental historians in the main failed to record defeats and only chose to chronicle triumphs. Only the bible itself records both triumphs and defeats. For us Jews, the Exodus is indeed a reality, and marks the birth of Israel as a nation and is the very foundation of many of the great ceremonial and ethical laws of Israel.

Sholem Asch, we are certain, did not find it easy to rewrite the story of the Exodus and to give it relevance to our time, but he chose the method of emphasis and he drew upon the great treasure house of talmud and midrash and has given us a great story.

According to Sholem Asch, Moses is a child of two mothers, his own mother, Jochebed, and of his foster-mother, Bathya, the daughter of Pharaoh. His foster-mother taught Moses courage and valor. She wished to dedicate him to the Egyptian priesthood but Moses very early rebelled against the ritualism of Osiris and the other Egyptian deities. He chose rather a military career and participated in many military expeditions as a young man and learned something of the art of war, when he marched with the Egyptian legions into Abyssinia.

At about the age of twenty, Moses experiences "the call of blood" and wishes to seek out his own family. Voices come to him from his mother, Jochebed, and in his memory there is a great longing for his own brethren. He foresees the splendor of court and palace and all its luxuries and finds his way to the slave camp of the Israelites where they are busily engaged in building cities for Ramesses. Here he meets Miriam, his own sister, who in turn brings him to his parents and to his brother Aaron. The members of his family persuade Moses to return to the palace.

This Moses does. But he cannot endure any longer the palace and the Egyptian inequality and the Egyptian injustice with its systems of slavery and the emphasis on death and the building of tombs for the dead. He goes back to Goshen and identifies himself with his brother slaves. He joins the gang of Hebrew slaves at the mud treading. "They worked rhythmically, as in a dance, kneading with their feet the heavy slime which had been unloaded at the bottom of the pit. Before long Moses began to feel a burning in his feet, as if there were a fire at the bottom of the pit, heating the clayey mass."

The overseer called upon the slaves to work faster and faster. When Moses saw that the Egyptian was smiting a Hebrew slave, Moses sprang out of the pit and struck the Egyptian task-master. Broken-hearted, indeed, was Moses when one day he found two Hebrews quarrelling with one another. Fiha, the servant of Bathya, soon informs Moses that his life is in danger and that the court authorities are in search of him. She succeeds in disguising Moses as a slave and makes possible his escape.

Moses finds himself a wanderer in the land of Midian. Here, too, there already comes to him the vision of the invisible God, to whom he offers prayer. He meets the daughters of the Priest of Midian, and aids them in their quarrels with the shepherds. Zipporah, the daughter of the priest of Midian, becomes the wife of Moses. Here it is important to record, that in the land of Midian, Moses meets the Balaam, who is the symbol of idolatry, the evil one, who always seeks to divert people from the worship of the true God. The great consecration of Moses is most vividly described by Sholem Asch when Moses is summoned through the burning bush to become the emancipator of his enslaved brethren. Asch follows closely the biblical text in the story of the Exodus. There is the account of the plagues and the dramatic crossing of the Red Sea.

The second half of the book, deals with the wanderings of the Israelites through the wilderness. Only a master artist such as Asch could write with such magnificent vividness the story of the revelation. It is a stirring description of the dialogue drama in which Israel and God enter into a holy covenant and Israel at Sinai becomes the immortal witness of Jehovah. One of the most emphasized portions of the book has to do with the quarrels of the tribes and their fault-finding with their leader. The burden of leadership is at all times most heavy. The leader, the true prophetic leader is ever ahead of the masses and is ever at one with vision. The masses are usually very slow to comprehend the vision of the leader. Moses is the pattern prophetic personality who suffers at the hands of the multitudes.

But he is also the leader who never deserts his post, come what may! Thus amidst trials and tribulations and murmurings, Moses succeeds in writing the code of holiness and the great testament of laws for this people. In this testament he proclaims the "Shema Yisroel", the greatest doctrine of Judaism and of all great religion, for even as God is One, so is humanity one. When his own sister Miriam finds fault with the "mixed multitudes" who joined Israel, he condemns her action.

When Fiha, the servant, comes to him from Egypt and brings him the news of the last days and suffering of his foster-mother and reports to him that Bathya herself has espoused the worship of the One God and that Fiha herself affirms the faith in the invisible One God, he accounts her as a member of the Jewish community. In order to bring home that all of us are children of the One God, he technically marries this negress.

Alas, Moses was not to enter the promised land. Joshua was to take up the leadership of the Israelites and bring them into the land of promise. How touching is the masterful description of Moses transmitting the leadership unto Joshua. At last Moses ascends Mount Nebo and there enters the heavenly portals "Moses ben Amram, draw not nigh. This is the place where rest the Shekhinah, the divine indwelling; and no man of flesh and blood may enter before surrendering his soul to the Angel of Death. Thou art now within the precincts of the Holy Temple which will be built here on earth, by the Bnai Israel. . . . And the voice of Jehovah was heard at the death of Moses as it had been heard during his life. A smile rested on Moses' face for on his lips hovered the kiss of Jehovah, the kiss wherewith God had taken the soul of Moses, our teacher, to rest with him."

There is the presumption that Sholem Asch has something fresh to say to us through his novel depicting the Exodus. It is from what he elaborates that we get the lessons he wishes to convey. First and foremost he gives us a remarkable description of the "mixed multitudes" which joined Israel and show Moses struggled to weld all these people into one holy community and made of these people the first monotheistic brotherhood.

We dwelling in Canada and in the United States, enjoying a sense of security, in a way constitute the latter-day Israel. But our own security is in danger. For millions of people in the world live in misery and in slavery and these distressed multitudes are ever ready for Balaam, the evil one. All mankind must be freed. Freedom is indivisible. The one world will ultimately come into being when mankind is motivated by a great ideal, the very ideal which motivated the slaves under the leadership of Moses.

Many a prophet like unto Moses will have to suffer before mankind is fired with the ideal of universal freedom, but that freedom is rooted in the concept of religion which teaches us all that even as God is one, so humanity is one. In our own modern times the Puritans, motivated by great religion, were able to cross the seas and build a new continent. We, like the Israelites of old and the Puritans of yesterday, can do likewise. Sholem Asch, has given us a great book and we rejoice that at the age of seventy-two, this master novelist continues to bless us with works of literature of such great religious inspiration.

"It makes such a difference"

Mrs. Helen V. was so pleased by the courteous treatment she received from a bank teller during a holiday trip that on her return home she wrote:

"It was really a pleasure to transact my modest banking affairs with you and I think the bank is very lucky to have such a charming and welcoming young woman with them. It makes such a difference when one is travelling to feel so at home."

At your own local branch, at any branch of any bank, you will find bank people going out of their way to look after you, efficiently and courteously. That is the way the chartered banks compete with each other for your business.
